

Managing Cross-Generational Teams

Today's organizational teams span multiple generations with various values.

From Baby Boomers, the seasoned leaders and Board Members, to Gen X and Millennial managers, and Gen Z employees entering into the workplace, each generation has different core needs and motivators guiding their actions.

Leading diverse teams often becomes challenging and even frustrating, especially when managing up and across large organizations. This training will increase your "Generational IQ" and help you learn and practice leadership strategies for managing cross-generational teams more effectively.
